Education – Policy Studies (EDPS)

EDPS 401 Sexuality, Gender, and Culture in Education (B2)
3 (fi 6) (winter term, 3-0-0).
This course explores, in theory and practice, contemporary issues related to sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression in K-12 schools. It draws upon critical scholarship to explore issues related to the construction and regulation of teacher and student identities, school leadership, bullying, violence, and discrimination. We further consider the implications of policy and other targeted educational interventions to help create safe, caring, and respectful teaching and learning environments.
Instructor: Dr Krisopher Wells.

NOTE: Community Service Learning (CSL) is an integral and required component of this course. CSL is a program at the University of Alberta that provides students with an opportunity to integrate classroom learning with volunteer placements in the Edmonton area.

ENGL 367: Contemporary Literature and Culture
(winter term)
In the preface to her book Epistemology of the Closet, Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick states that “an understanding of virtually any aspect of modern Western culture must be, not merely incomplete, but damaged in its central substance to the degree that it does not incorporate a critical analysis of modern homo/heterosexual definition.” In this course we will take up Kosofsky Sedgwick’s challenge and will consider contemporary Western local and global literature and culture by focusing on texts (drama, fiction, non-fiction, film, theory, poetry, quilts, and other cultural texts) written by or about people invested in the “modern homo/heterosexual definition” and/or who identify as part of a sexual or gender minority (LGBTQIA*). We will consider theories, political trends, and key historical moments (such as the Compton's Cafeteria Riots, the Stonewall Riots, the AIDS crises, the removal of first homosexuality and later gender dysphoria from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, the establishment of organizations like SMUG and KEGALE in developing countries, the recent inclusion of forced sterilization in sex-reassignment surgery in the mandate of the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture) that have shaped queer writing, queer writers, and the act of writing queerly. In reading these texts, we will ask questions about how “queer” is performed and understood from various cultural and generational perspectives, we will consider conflicting goals of an identity movement and struggles surrounding terminology, we will explore relationships between art and social change, and we will take on other relevant topics as they come up in class. We will interact with local queer communities and queer art. Please note that this class has a heavy reading load. Texts to be determined.

EDPS 501 Sexual and Gender Minorities in Education and Culture (LEC X01)
Œ3 (fi 6) (fall term, 3-0-0).
Since the 1990s there has been a concerted effort to study, research, and make sexual and gender minority (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer) identities, histories, voices, and cultures visible in mainstream K-12 education in North America. This research, teaching, and cultural work has sought to (1) interrogate hetero- and gender-normative relationships of power and identity formation, (2) engage queer pedagogy and processes of knowledge production, and (3) develop critical modes of inquiry to investigate the maintenance of the status quo in contemporary schooling. Utilizing critical and queer perspectives in this course, we will: Objective 1: Investigate the social, cultural, religious, economic, and political factors that have rendered sexual orientation and gender identity as private, rather than public education concerns. Objective 2: Situate and study the historical and contemporary contexts of K-12 education that have perpetuated silences, institutionalized curricular absences, and propagated pedagogical omissions of sexual and gender minority identities. Objective 3: Examine how critical and queer theorizing and research can support the development of a queer critical praxis, inform educational policy, and offer professional development opportunities for pre-service and professional teachers. Objective 4: Consider risks and challenges for sexual and gender minority educators and students in schooling as well as opportunities for creating inclusive, affirming, and supportive K-12 school environments.

EDPY 597 / 697 Resilience in Adolescence (SEM A1)
(taught in conjunction with EDPY 697 Lec A1) Œ3 (fi 6) (fall term, 0-3s-0).
This interdisciplinary course is open to all graduate students interested in how queer and other youth across differences grow into resilience. In this course, resilience in adolescence will be explored as a complex biopsychosocial process that enables youth, potentially vulnerable due to sexual, gender, racial, ethno-cultural, class, ability, and other relational differences, to transgress adversity; to deal with consequential mental and emotional trauma; to discern the personal, social, and environmental assets needed to grow in self-respect and... self-confidence; to set realistic goals and engage in problem solving as part of surviving, thriving, and acting in individual and social contexts; and to build supportive, collaborative relationships in family, school, and other social contexts. The course has three objectives in examining resilience in adolescence: (1) to advance knowledge of how youth across relational differences grow into resilience in order to inform inclusive education, including comprehensive health education, for youth; (2) to explore evidence-based approaches to comprehensive policy development and implementation via caring practices, programs, strategies, and interventions in education and healthcare for vulnerable youth; and (3) to guide the educational preparation and continuing development of educators and healthcare professionals so they can better meet the needs of vulnerable youth.
